

LeapPad 3

This is the Leap Pad 3; a learning tablet for younger kids. It gives them a bit of a head start in learning with its games and teaching apps!

The Apps

This tablet has lots to offer from games to music to photos! Here are a few things it can do:

- Games
- Photos
- Videos
- Painting
- Music

And there's a lot more where that came from! If you don't have any books to read, then the Leap Pad has its own library with lots of stories to read. They are suitable for kids over 3.

My comment:

When I was small, I had a leap frog console (It was pretty alike to this one but an earlier version). I really loved playing all the fun games and enjoyed taking pictures and videos! I used it a lot in the car on long journeys.

The games

Now you have probably been thinking about what types of games there are. Well I can tell you there is a colossal amount of them! You do have to buy them separately which is annoying, but they are really fun and there is built in Wi-Fi which can be used to download games. They are addictive in a good way and help your child learn.

Some games are:

- PAW Patrol: Ready for Action!
- Disney Frozen Learning Game
- Cooking! Recipes on the Road
- Letter Factory

My comment:

It may just look like a normal game, but it has its good sides. The games are specially designed to educate your child while he or she plays. I always used to play 'Penguins of Madagascar' where I had to rescue people on one big mission but along the way there might be a code I need to break by using maths and other stuff like that.

And Finally

So, you know what apps you can use and what games but what about the important stuff? This tablet costs around £100 but you can often get it on offer at around £69.99 from Argos or Amazon. It is rated 4 stars on Amazon.

By John J (Year 6)